PLEYEL, WOLFF, & Co.

(Of Paris).

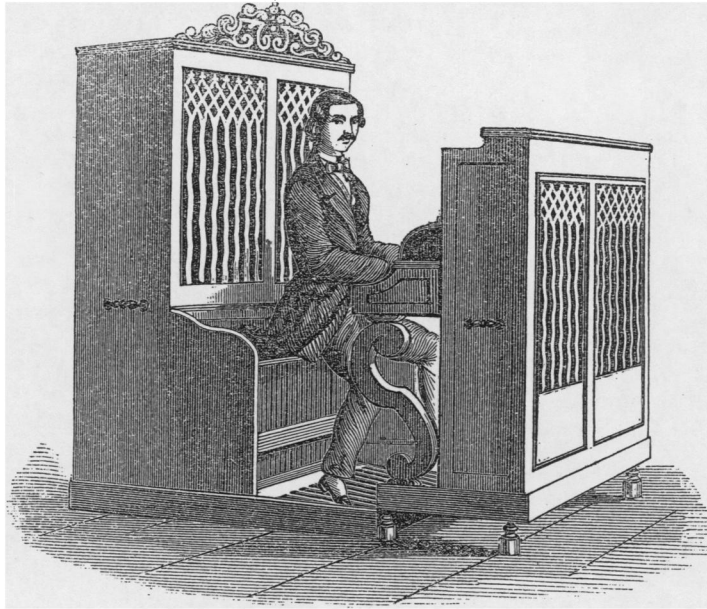

ESTABLISHED 1807.

Gold Medals in 1827, 1834, 1839, 1844. (Hors de Concours, 1849.) Cross of the Legion of Honour, 1834.
Medal of Honour, Universal Exhibition of 1855.

PLEYEL'S PEDALIER.

MM. PLEYEL, WOLFF, and Co., have the honour to announce that they have imported, with a view to make it known in the United Kingdom, the new Instrument of their invention called the PEDALIER, designed to facilitate the study of the pedals, and for which they have obtained patents in France, England, and Belgium.

Price £40.

This design of the Pedalier (with a Cottage Pianoforte placed before it), illustrates the Application of this Instrument.

Extract from the MAITRISE, The Journal of Sacred Music :

"If the number of clever organists has always been very limited, this fact has resulted from the difficulty of procuring an instrument on which they could practise. The organist is therefore in most instances compelled to practise on a piano ; but the pedals, which constitute at once the main difficulty of the organist, are wanting. A distinguished musician, M. Auguste Wolff, head of the house of Pleyel, Wolff, and Co., has recently invented a Pédalier forming an instrument independent in itself, having its own strings, hammers, and mechanism. This instrument may be introduced into the smallest apartment. The height of the Pédalier allows its strings to be unusually long and thick : while the dimension of the sounding board, proportionately large for a key-board of two octaves and a half, imparts a peculiar richness and power to its tones. In the Pédalier of M. Auguste Wolff, the lowest C is as pure and as full as that of the best flute-stop of 16 feet. As in the organ, in which a play of 8 feet is always added to a play of 16 feet. M. Auguste Wolff, with a view to modify the gravity of the thick strings of his instrument, has united with them finer strings which produce at the same time the octave next above. The prolonged vibration is of remarkable fullness. This beautiful instrument has the advantage of being attainable at a moderate price ; therefore it appears to us that it will be found to be widely useful. Henceforth, by its aid, the organist will be enabled to study, in his own room, the most complicated organ music ; the pianist may familiarize himself with the numerous chefs-d'œuvre of the great masters written with pedal obligato ; and composers for the piano will find new resources in this instrument, which we believe is destined to become the complement of every grand piano."—Niedermeyer.

The following opinions on the merits of the Pédalier, are extracted from Letters from ROSSINI, SIR GEORGE SMART, and W. T. BEST, of Liverpool.

From ROSSINI to COSTA :

"Voglio che siate il primo a conoscere un piano a pedale che chiamasi Pédalier d'invenzione di Wolff, é il portatore della presente Georges Pfeiffer giovane distintissimo che si farà sentire il suddetto Pédalier, ritengo questo nuovo strumento d'una grande ricchezza per lo stile fugato."

From SIR GEORGE SMART to GEORGES PFEIFFER :

"I consider that the ingenious and very clever invention of the Pédalier will be most useful, especially as the instrument can be adapted to a Pianoforte of any size."

From W. T. BEST to GEORGES PFEIFFER :

"I have examined and played upon the Pédalier, and consider it the most successful instrument of its kind hitherto produced. The tone possesses remarkable sonority and power. An organist having this instrument in his chamber may without inconvenience perfect himself in all that relates to the employment of the pedals of an organ."

THE PEDALIER MAY BE SEEN AT THE CRYSTAL PALACE

In the course of this month, where M. GEORGES PFEIFFER will perform on it daily.

The Instrument may be obtained in London of Chappell and Co., New Bond Street ; and Metzler and Co., Great Marlborough Street ; of Mr. Mellor, Huddersfield ; and, during the month of July, at M. Georges Pfeiffer's residence, 11, Panton Square, Coventry Street.
